President's Corner - Joe Steiner

I'll try to keep my column on the short side this month, so we have more space available sharing information about the bands appearing at the Memorial Day festival.

I'm really excited about the lineup this year, but the festival experience involves much more than just the stage show. The special events, campfire pickin', and general comradery complete the experience for a lot of folks. Walking around the park to see who is picking, and stopping to chat along the way, is a rewarding experience in and of itself!

As I mentioned last time, Chris Steiner will have a full slate of special events. She is still working on them, but we will include more information in upcoming newsletters. They will certainly include workshops and activities, a band scramble, gospel sing, as well as special showcases from the Tomorrow's Bluegrass Stars kids.

I did promise to keep it short this month, but before I "sign off" I do want to mention the monthly NIBGA jam sessions at the Southwest Conservation Club every third Sunday during October, November, and January through April. The sessions have been particularly well attended lately -- it's a lot of fun to get together and share tunes and songs. If you're looking for a place to try out a new song or some new licks, the NIBGA jam is a great place. If you're more on the beginner side, it's also a great place to come and play along with others. Although everyone gets a chance to choose a song, there's never any pressure if you just want to stay in the background.

I'll see you at the Memorial Day festival, if not before! Joe

You've got to love a band that takes their name from a 1964 recording of the Kentucky Colonels! Just as Clarence and Roland White, Billy Ray Latham, and Roger Bush were on their classic album on World Pacific Records, the members of Appalachian Swing are unabashed in their love for the hard-driving world of bluegrass music. And, just as with the Kentucky Colonels, that is readily apparent in a rather raucous musical style delivered in a very polished context -- a feat which can only be accomplished when one learns the subtleties of musical finesse.

They click together perfectly on rhythm, which creates a perfect bed for their vocals and instrumental improvisations. They have all the bases covered -- Adam Schlenker (guitar and vocals), Hayes Griffin (mandolin and vocals), Todd Sams (banjo), and George Welling (bass and vocals) are all top notch instrumentally. And they feature the kind of powerful vocals you expect from a hard-driving bluegrass band. I'm really excited to see this versatile, powerful bluegrass ensemble from central Ohio in person!

My Brother's Keeper, from Cincinnati, OH, is on the progressive side, and they show the influence of multiple genres in their performances. Brothers Benjamin, Titus, and Joshua Luckhaupt on guitar, mandolin, and fiddle, along with Wyatt "Sawmill" Murray on upright bass, are all rock solid, both instrumentally and vocally. Progressive, yes, but there can be no doubt of bluegrass influence in the tightness of their harmonies and instrumental work. This will be their third appearance at Tri-State, and they effuse a soulful approach that has made them a big hit in each of their previous appearances.

Fox Crossing Stringband, from Chicago, Illinois, is a group that features an entertaining stage presence, strong vocal harmonies, some nice original material, and covers of popular songs, all within a traditional bluegrass context. They feature five bluegrass instruments, although that is accomplished with the three members alternating on multiple instruments throughout their program.

Allison Branch plays guitar, Despina Pafiralides alternates between fiddle and mandolin, and Cassie Wright plays dobro and banjo. All three contribute lead and harmony vocals, and originals from all three are featured in their repertoire. There are not a lot of all-female bluegrass bands, but perhaps Fox Crossing Stringband will inspire a change in that regard!

Stayed tuned next newsletter for more "Buzz on the Bands".

NIBGA Scholarships

In a testament to the enduring spirit of musical generosity, the Northern Indiana Bluegrass Association (NIBGA) persists in its mission to nurture talent and passion within the bluegrass community.

Following the passing of TJ Collins, a stalwart advocate for bluegrass music, his wife Barb has requested that mourners honor his memory by directing donations to NIBGA, specifically earmarked for the scholarship fund. This gesture not only commemorates Collins' dedication to the craft but also ensures that future generations of bluegrass enthusiasts will have access to educational opportunities.

Established by the NIBGA board, the scholarship program aims to enhance individual skills related to playing, singing, dancing, or performing bluegrass or old-timey acoustical music. With a preference for long-time members and their immediate families, the scholarships are nonetheless open to any passionate individual in the upper Midwest, regardless of age.

Over the years, NIBGA has awarded an impressive sum exceeding $30,000 in scholarships, reflecting its substantial investment in fostering musical talent. These awards, which can range up to complete tuition refunds based on the decision of the selection board, serve as a testament to NIBGA's dedication to advancing the bluegrass genre.

The scholarships not only provide financial assistance but also serve as a catalyst for personal and artistic growth, empowering recipients to pursue their musical aspirations. By offering support to both seasoned members and newcomers alike, NIBGA ensures that the rich tradition of bluegrass music continues to thrive in the region.

In a landscape where arts education funding often faces challenges, initiatives like NIBGA's scholarship program stand as beacons of hope, championing the transformative power of music in communities. As the organization carries forward its legacy of musical support, it reaffirms its position as a cornerstone of the bluegrass community, inspiring generations to come.
